At present, it is not possible to push Sketch Pad off of a screen and onto another one (think: Mac Toaster). This is a bummer, but is probably a necessary and temporary feature. Additionally, imported images have a type of layer that cannot be turned off which is unlike the usual Layers where you can choose between Enabled and Disabled. You can turn a single layer off, but not the whole page as you can with ordinary Photoshop layers. Ouch. That functionality aside, Sketch Pad is a great tool whether or not you like using the Sketch Pad feature. It is quite easy to create your own art board and start creating single layers that can be freely moved about. I've been using Lightroom 5.x for the past few months. I absolutely love the new app. Being at work I have to say that I was ready to give it a try on an iPad. I only make time for using Apple devices at home. So why should I waste time on an iPad when I have my desktop? I've used Lightroom 4 for over a year now and I barely use my desktop. But maintaining both is a bear. I wanted to try it out on an iPad but I was also interested in knowing how LR 5 works since it's been around for a long time.

The functionality of the Lens Blur effect is being tweaked to make it faster. Currently, Lens Blur is designed to reinforce skin tones, especially for skin retouching. However, there are currently no plans to add the option to sharpen the skin across multiple layers. There is an option to weaken all the layers under the highlight channel instead. Users will be able to elect to choose one or another channel under the highlight channel. Adobe Photoshop CC 2019 introduced new features including collage mode, Handling layer, Color flattener, ACR for Lightroom users and new lens blur effects. If using third-party RAW processing tools, you can import photography directly into Photoshop. Newly added features include image (& text) recognition for the Layer panel, new brush presets, and a faster Eye Dropper tool. The 5.2 update also introduced Universal curve. The new Layer panel in Photoshop CC now not only previews changes in size and perspective, it also contains handy 'See full-size information' button which shows only image information in the panel. The Color Correction tools in the Layers panel are now more efficient and faster. For the Edge Warp tool, Adobe has added the option that allows you to flatten objects on the curve, making it much faster and more flexible. One of the most significant changes is the integration of facial recognition (NSFW). While facial recognition does not replace face detection, it knows when it's face detection, and offer edits accordingly.

The type of features that Adobe decided to implement in this update are the following. Some of these will likely be available in the new layers panel within the upcoming release of Photoshop CC 2018.
